LOTTERY IN ITALY

Gambling Under the Auspices of the Government.

THE DRAWING IN PUBLIC.

An Eager, Excited, Turbulent Crowd tense Interest-The Prizes and the Chances of the Players.

King Humbert L made the rules for the public lottery of Italy:

First.-The public lottery is temporarily maintained by the favor of the state under the following laws.

minister of finance, under whom the chiefs are chosen for their respective functions. Third .- The lotto is formed by ninety, numbered from 1 to 90, inclusive,

Second.-It is administered by the five of which drawn by chance determine the successful.

Fourth.-One can "play the lotto" in the following manner:

On one number (very rarely played). On all five numbers (very rarely

On two numbers-the "ambo." On three numbers, which is known as the "terno."

On four numbers, which is known as the "quaterno."

Fifth.-When one number is played the winner is paid ten times and a half his output; when two numbers are played the winner is paid 350 times his output; when three numbers are played the winner is paid 5,250 times his output; when four numbers are played the winner is paid 60,000 times his output. Therefore if one has by any chance bought a No. 1 ticket and wins the four numbers (quaterno) he wins $60,000. At 5 o'clock on every Saturday afternoon throughout all Italy the drawing of the lotto takes place. In Naples the ceremony is held at the end of a foul, filthy alley known as the Impresa, back in a great courtyard, in full view of the people on the balcony of an old palace. From early in the afternoon until the fatal hour the streets of Santa Chiara and the alley fill up with the crowd whose hope on this day is to be deceived. The streets are to pay for them. But at the stroke of green table, on which is placed a crystal ball bound with silver, and an iron box containing ninety other little boxed in snowy white, chosen by law from Miss Geneva Doyle returned to Barre the orphan asylum to draw up from At the sight of these familiar, looked for objects the crowd begins to cry and chant, to beseech and evoke. It begs the little orphan child to draw well. And the child in his white robe, his innocent eyes on the mass of people, looks down on the beggars with their yellow locks and on the appealing mass. One by one the balls are taken out from their sealed boxes, displayed to the people and dropped into the big bowl. They have blindfolded the little bambino, and he stands on a chair, for he is only eight years of age and is small, in full sight of the people. The balls bav-

and there is a murmur-and a fresh adjuration for the child to draw well chance. The child draws again, this time No. 47, and the holders of the terno are now the interested ones, for the next will be their last chance. The enthusiasm breaks forth again with murmurs and cries and prayers, and the quiet child before the urn in his white dress hears them and trembles, for he knows that he is menaced. Before the people there is a blackboard, and a man posts up the numbers as they are drawn-5, 47, 11, 10 and 80. And this series of five is discussed, yelled at, challenged, cursed, for not one in the crowd has drawn a fortunate number. The child's eyes are unbound, and be is put down and set free. The balls are returned into their boxes sealed up and carried away under the eyes of the crowd, which after walting for a moment, unable to believe its ill fortune, breaks up and disrupts. Apathy is thrown upon the mafority as much as such a state of mind is possible to a Neapolitan mass as they begin in groups to discuss the fallure of their schemes and their combinations.-Marie Van Vorst in Harper's Magazine.

The Springbok. A peculiarity of that most beautiful of South African antelopes the springbok is that it always leaps over human tracks. It is at once exceedingly shy and marvelously active, and the reason for this strange antic is its intense suspicion of any possible enemies, among whom it has come to recognize man as the most dangerous. It is not only with human tracks that the springbok goes through this performance, for it does the same with the tracks of lions or even when it gets wind of a lion. The leap is exceedingly graceful, and the animal covers from twelve to fifteen feet at each bound. It drops on all four feet at once and Immediately rises again, making a clear spring without any run. Its usual gait when not pursued is a light springy trot. The springbok usually travels with its nose to the ground, as if constantly on the lookout for the scent of
